Cincinnati Cancer Advisors to Offer In-Office Liquid Biopsies to Patients Seeking a Second Opinion on Their Cancer Diagnosis

Liquid Biopsies Represent an Increasing Popular and Effective Diagnostic Tool for Cancer Patients Wishing to Avoid Tissue-Based Biopsies

CINCINNATI – May 20, 2021 – One of the city’s premier second-opinion cancer resources, Cincinnati Cancer Advisors (CCA), has begun offering “liquid biopsy” blood tests to cancer patients seeking a second opinion at CCA’s Cincinnati, Ohio office.

This represents a further extension of CCA’s commitment to not only provide free consultative oncology services, but also to connect its patients to innovative ways to learn more about the state of their disease progression and make informed decisions about their treatment course. This will also offer CCA’s patients the opportunity to have the tests administered while they are at CCA’s office under the supervision of its clinical team, rather than scheduling a subsequent visit to an alternate facility.

“Liquid biopsies represent an opportunity for patients to avoid tissue-based biopsies and may detect cancer cells that are in the blood stream when there is no visible disease seen on conventional imaging,” said Cincinnati Cancer Advisors founder, Dr. William Barrett. “These groundbreaking tests are being offered to our patients at a low cost, or often at no cost to the patient. This is in keeping with CCA’s commitment to reduce the mortality, suffering and financial toxicity that often accompanies a cancer diagnosis by providing premium quality, zero cost, oncology second opinions to patients in the Greater Cincinnati area.”

For more information about receiving a no-cost second opinion from Cincinnati Cancer Advisors or a liquid biopsy where appropriate, Greater Cincinnati residents should visit CCA’s website at <https://www.cincinnati-canceradvisors.org>.
